Container Serving Hatches

Welcome to the sixth issue of Box Inspiration, your weekly dose of fresh container conversion ideas. This week we show you how the simple addition of a serving hatch can help transform a container from a metal box into a catering or retail building.

The basic modular design and robust structure of shipping containers are making them a popular building material choice around the world. Some of the most popular enquiries of this type we receive involves the conversion of containers into catering or retail units, and serving hatches are nearly always required.

We can fabricate and install serving hatches into any size container. There are many options regarding this including anti vandal shutters, flat panel security steel doors, roller shutters, hook and latch systems and many more. A couple of jobs that included serving hatches are included below.
